Läbberdan, V. Læberdan.

Läbberig, adj. and adv. [from Läb] insipid, unsavoury.

Läbbern, v. tr. and intr. [allied to Lippe] 1) to lap, to lick up. 2) [rather provincial] to talk in a tedious and absurd manner, to twattle.

1. Läben, [from Läb] I. v. tr. to mix with runnet, to coagulate [milk]. II. v. intr. and v. r. sich —, to undergo the process of coagulation, to coagulate, to curdle.

Läb=kräut, n. V. Læbkräut.

2. Läben, [Low Sax. laven, Goth. kleibjan; originally = nähren] I. v. tr. to restore wasted strength, to refresh, to recreate. Der Wein hat ihn gelabt, the wine has revived or enlivened his spirits; einen Kranken —, to give a patient corroboratives or corroborants, it. to give a patient some refreshing or cooling drink; eine — de Arznei, ein — der Trank, a corroborant medicine, a corroborative, a refreshing or cooling drink. Fig. to procure enjoyment, to comfort. Guer Anblick labt mich, the sight of you comforts me; jene Farbe labt das Auge, that colour pleases the eye. II. v. r. sich —, to refresh, to recreate one's self. Sich mit Speise und Trank —, to take some refreshments, to refresh one's self with food and drink. Fig. to enjoy any thing. Sich an einem Anblicke —, to feast one's eyes on a sight, to enjoy a sight; das labt die Nase, that recreates the nostrils.

Læberdan, m. [-es] [Engl. Aberdeen-fish, D. abberdaan] salted cod-fish.

Läbet, [a corruption of the Fr. la bête, at cards] an expression at certain games at cards, signifying loss. — werden, to be beasted or looted. Fig. [in popular language] to be worn out, to have or get the worse, to be a loser. Jemand — machen, to beast any one. Das — [a game at cards], loo, beast. — spielen, to play at loo or beast.

Läbet=spiel, n. loo, beast [a game at cards].

Läbiälbuchstabe, m. [-n, pl. -n] labial letter, V. Lippenbuchstabe.

Läbfuchen, m. [-s, pl. -] V. [the usual word] Zebfuchen.

Läborant, m. [-en, pl. -en] a chemist; an assistant or a workman in a laboratory.

Läboratorium, n. [-s, pl. Læboratorien] laboratory [of a chemist].

Läboriren, v. intr. to make experiments in chemistry; it. to seek the philosopher's stone. F. g. [in fam. lang.] An einer Krankheit —, to be afflicted with a disease, to labour under a disease.

Läbrädorstein, m. [-es, pl. -e] [in mineralogy] labrador or opalescent feldspar, labradorstone.

Läbsal, n. [-es, pl. -e] refreshment, recreation, a restorative, cordial. Fig. comfort. Gute Poesie ist — für Herz und Geist, good poetry is a recreation for the heart and mind; eine grüne Flur ist ein — für das Auge, a verdant field is a recreation to the eye; ein gutes Bett ist ein — für den müden Reisenden, a good bed is a comfort to the weary traveller.

1. Läbung, f. [V. 1. Læben] coagulation.

2. Läbung, f. V. Læbsal.

Läbyrinth, n. [-es, pl. -e] labyrinth, maze. Die Wendungen eines — es, the turnings and windings of a labyrinth or maze. [in anatomy] the labyrinth of the ear. Fig. an inexplicable or inextricable difficulty, a labyrinth. Sich in — e verwickeln, to run into labyrinths, to get into inextricable difficulties.

Läbyrinthisch, adj. and adv. intricate, perplexed, labyrinthian.

Lacedämon, n. [-s] Lacedemon.

Lacedämonier, m., — inn, f. Lacedemonian.

Lacedämonisch, adj. and adv. Lacedemonian, in the manner of the Lacedemonians.

Lächbar, adj. [V. 1. Lachen] [among foresters] Ein — er Baum, a tree good for tapping to obtain the rosin of it.

Lächbaum, m. [-es, pl. -bäume] [among foresters] 1) a tree into which cuts have been made for obtaining the rosin. 2) a tree marked with cuts to serve as a boundary, a limit-tree. 3) any tree marked with cuts serving as a guide or index.

1. Läche, f. [pl. -n] [allied to Loch, Lüde] [among foresters] 1) a mark cut in a tree. 2) a place on the stem of a tree stripped of the bark [for obtaining rosin]. 3) V. Lächbaum. 4) a path or lane cut through a thicket.

2. Läche, f. [pl. -n] [allied to the L. lacus, lacuna, Sw. lag = Wasser &c., Fr. lac, Eng. lake, Scotch loch = See] pool, puddle. Syn. Lache, See [der], Pfuhl, Pfüze, Sumpf, Teich, Weiher. A See is not only the largest inland standing water, but it may also have an outlet, and consequently be connected with rivers, as the lake of Geneva with the Rhone. Its water is also pure and is, for the most part, inhabited by different kinds of fish. A Pfuhl is distinguished from a See in being smaller, and in having no outlet: it is sometimes limpid, at others turbid, and may, or may not, contain fish. A Pfüze is only a smaller Pfuhl, which may disappear as easily as it is formed. A Pfuhl, however, may be an agreeable piece of water, and of greater or less extent; both agree in not having any outlet. A Sumpf is distinguished from the two last in having its waters over a soft soil which gives way under the feet. He who is not sure of his way in traversing a wood may easily stick fast in Sümpfen. In some boggy districts the Sümpfe do not dry up even in summer. Läche is peculiar to Upper Germany; its signification is the same as Pfuhl in Lower Germany. Teich and Weiher are distinguished from the rest as being artificial and destined as reservoirs for fish; the former, or even both, are often without this especial destination, and only serve as an embellishing piece of water in pleasure-grounds.

Lächennoblauch, m. [in botany] water-germander, scordium.

3. Läche, f. [V. 2. Lachen] act of laughing, laugh; it. manner of laughing. Eine helle, laute — ausschlagen, to break out into laughter, to burst into a loud laugh or to burst out with laughing.

Lächeln, V. 1. Lachen.

Lächeln, I. v. intr. to smile. Einem —, to smile upon any one: über Etwas —, to smile at a thing: boshaft, höhnisch, spöttisch —, to sneer: albern or einfältig —, to simper. Fig. Die Gelegenheit, die nun lächelt, occasion which now smiles, the favorable opportunity that now offers itself: der — de Frühling, smiling spring; mir lächelt keine Hoffnung, I have no glimmering of hope; ihm — Ruhm und Sieg, glory and victory smile upon him; dieser Ort lächelt mir vor allen, this spot or place pleases me best of all. II. v. tr. [chiefly in higher lang.] to express or impart any thing by a smile or by smiling. Einem Liebe —, to impart one's love to any one by a smile; sie lächelte Spott auf ihn, she smiled upon him with a mocking air. Das —, act of smiling, smile; ein holdes, süßes —, a sweet smile; ein boshaftes —, a sneer; ein höhnisches, ein beißendes —, a satirical, a sarcastic grin; ein verstecktes —, a lurking smile.

1. Lächen, v. tr. [allied to schlagen, Loch, See, V. 1. Lache] [among foresters] 1) to cut marks in the bark of a tree, to make a cut in the bark. 2) to cut a path or lane through a thicket.

2. Lächen, [Goth. hlahjan, Icel. hleja, allied to klagen, to lofen, to the Gr. λαλέειν and L. loquor] I. v. intr. to laugh. Ueber Etwas —, to laugh at a thing; laut —, to laugh out or aloud, to burst into a loud laugh; überlaut, aus vollem Halse or hellauf —, to laugh out immoderately, to split one's sides with laughing or laughter, to chuckle; halblaut or verstopfen —, to giggle, V. Richern [said of girls]; sich fränk, sich halb fränk, zu Tode — [in fam. lang.], to die with laughing, to split one's sides with laughing; sich den Bauch halten vor — [in popular lang.], to shake one's sides with laughter, to be ready to split one's sides with laughing; erzwungen —, to laugh but faintly, forcedly; ich konnte mich des — s nicht enthalten, I could not help or forbear laughing; prov. wer zuletzt lacht, lacht am besten, they will be best off who laugh last; in das Äußere —, to laugh in one's sleeve; Einem in's Gesicht —, to laugh at any one to his face, it. fig. [Einem unter die Nase —], to laugh at any one with a defying air; er lacht über [verlacht] Sie, he laughs at you; einer Sache or über eine Sache —, to laugh at a thing. Fig. Redlichkeit lachte auf seiner Stirn [rather high-flown], honesty was written on his forehead; Alles lacht in diesem Land=haufe, every thing is or looks pleasant, smiles in this country-house; die — den Thäler, the smiling valleys; die — den Fluren, the laughing fields; — de Erben [in fam. lang.], laughing, distant heirs. Prov. Baar Geld lacht, money commands all. II. v. tr. 1) to impart by laughing. Er lachte mir Beifall, he applauded me laughing or with a laugh, he smiled applause or approbation upon me. 2) to effect by laughing. Es ist schwer, die Thoren klüger zu —, it is difficult, to make fools wiser by laughing at them. Das —, act of laughing, laughter, laugh; ein erzwungenes —, a forced laugh. Fig. Sardonisches —, sardonic or sardonic laugh, sneer.

laugher, a merry creature. †—maul, n. fig. a person fond of laughing, a giggler. —meve, f. the laughing-gull. —müßel, m. muscle of risibility. —taube, f., dim. —täubchen, || —täublein, n. laughing-dove, Indian turtle-dove. Fig. [in popular lang.] Sie ist eine rechte —taube, she laughs always, is of a very risible disposition. —weihē, f. kestrel, stannell, wind-hover. —zahn, m., —zähne, pl. one of the middle foreteeth, which are shown in laughing.

Lachenswerth, adj. and adv. deserving to be laughed at, laughworthy, laughable, risible, ridiculous.

Lächer, m. [-s, pl. -], —inn, f. a person who laughs, laugher. Er hat die — auf seiner Seite, he has the laughers on his side, the laugh runs on his side, is in his favour.

Lächerhaft, adj. and adv. [a little low] disposed to laugh, of a risible disposition. Es ist ihm nicht — zu Muthe, he is not disposed to laugh, is not in a laughing humour.

Lächerlich, adj. and adv. 1) [rather provincial, or in pop. lang.] disposed to laugh, risible. Einen — machen, to make any one laugh. 2) [that may justly excite laughter] laughable, risible. —e Geschichte, laughable story; ein —er Kauz, a droll, ludicrous blade or fellow; ich finde daran nichts —es, I find nothing to laugh at in that. 3) ridiculous. Wie —ist das! how ridiculous that is! ein —er Mensch, a ridiculous man or fellow; Einen, Etwas — machen, to turn any one or any thing into ridicule, to ridicule any one &c.; sich — machen, — werden, to make one's self ridiculous, to expose one's self to laughter; to fall into ridicule; in das —e fallen, to fall into ridicule. Syn. Lächerlich, Belachenswerth, Komisch, Possierlich, Burlesk. The Belachenswerthe deserves to be laughed at, even if it should not always excite laughter. The Lächerliche is, properly, what really provokes laughter; it is, however, often confounded with belachenswerth. The really Belachenswerthe should be the only source of the Lächerliche, but poets, by humorous combinations and associations, can often make things lächerlich which are not at all belachenswerth. The Komische is the Lächerliche in action. Every thing komisch is therefore lächerlich, but every thing lächerlich is not komisch. The Possierliche [droll] is more immediately the Lächerliche in gesture. The monkey, on account of his lächerlichen motions, is a possierliches animal. Children, also, are possierlich when, in their games, they imitate the serious manner of older persons. The Burleske consists in a lächerlichen representation of what is great and important. There is, however, a twofold sort of the Burlesken, V. Parodie, Travestiren.

Lächerlichkeit, f. 1) ridiculousness. 2) a ridiculous thing.

Lächern, [rather provincial, or in popular lang.] I. v. tr. to make laugh. Seine Antwort hat mich gelächert, his answer has made me laugh. II. v. intr. impers. to have an inclination or mind to laugh. Es lachert mich, wenn ich daran denke, I cannot but laugh whenever I think of it.

SYN. Lasten, Sünden, Verbrechen, Untugend. Die Sünde is the natural disposition of man towards evil. Eine Sünde or Verbrechen is any single immoral and culpable action. Lasten is a proneness to culpable actions. We can but once in our life commit a certain sin, or a certain crime, without having a predominating inclination to it, or without acting from habit. A sober man may once become intoxicated without being addicted to the Lasten of drunkenness. A Verbrechen is a Sünde against the law; but a Verbrechen is not necessarily lastenhaft, for he may be hurried away by the heat of passion to commit a crime which the law must punish. Untugend is a lower degree of Lasten; the former, however, may give rise to the latter. Mere bad habits, in which moral action is not at all considered, are also called Untugenden, as the Untugend in children of squinting &c., in a horse of shying, &c.

2. Leene, or Lenne, f. [pl.—n] [perhaps allied to the Sw. len = weich, L. lentis] Norway maple.

Leer, adj. and adv. [Sax. ge-laer, ge-laere, probably from le sen = sammeln, so that it signified originally abgelesen] empty, unoccupied. Eine —e Börse, an empty purse; ein —er Platz, Raum, an empty place, space; dieses Haus steht —, that house is vacant; die Kutsche ist — zurückgekommen, the coach is come back empty; — es Papier, blank paper; eine Zeile — lassen, to leave a line in blank; — machen, to empty; — werden, to become empty, to empty; dieser Kanal wird täglich —er, that canal decreases every day; [among engravers] — e Platte, any thing prepared to engrave or draw upon; — es Stroh, straw freed from the grain, [empty] straw; prov. —es Stroh dreschen, to pour water into a sieve; die Bäume sind —, the trees are without fruit, are stripped of their fruit; —, mit —er Hand, mit —en Händen, empty-handed. Fig. Er ist — ausgegangen, hat mit —en Händen abziehen müssen [in familiar language], he is come away empty-handed, has got nothing, has been disappointed; es wird nicht — abgehen [in familiar language], it will not be without any profit or gain, something will be gained by it; it. it will not pass without some loss, something will be lost by it; it. it will come to blows; ein —er Kopf, an empty wit; — e Worte, ein —es Geschwätz, empty words, discourse void of sense, an empty discourse; — e Drohungen, vain threats; eine —e Hoffnung, an empty, vain hope; — e Träume, empty dreams; — e [with some also ledige] or freie Stunden, leisure or spare hours. Syn. Leer, Ledig. Leer is what contains nothing, ledig implies that a thing has contained, or could contain something, but does not. A bottle is leer because nothing is in it; it is ledig inasmuch as it can be filled. Leer, however, is used in both these senses. A place is ledig when no one possesses it who may hinder another from taking it. Hence, applied to incorporeal objects we can only use leer, and not ledig. An ignorant man is called a leerer, and not a lediger Kopf. So we also say leere promises or words, and not ledige. An unmarried person is called ledig because no connexion exists which hinders him from contracting marriage. In like manner, any post that is vacant is called erledigt, a place or service ledig. We say the throne is erledigt. Leer, Wüste, Deede. A place is leer from want of objects, wüste in as far as it cannot, on that account, be inhabited by man, and öde when we find in it nothing that is useful or agreeable to him, more especially the absence of other human beings. Bottles, dishes, pockets, boxes &c. are leer when there is nothing more in them; a country lies wüste when it is uninhabitable; the cell of a nun is neither leer nor wüste, but its inmate may find it öde when she seeks in vain for what alone could satisfy the yearnings of her heart.

Leer = becher, m. [in paper-mills] a wooden vessel or pail [for taking the stamped rags out of the cistern]. — darm, m. [in anatomy] jejunum. — kopf, m. fig. an addle-pated person, an empty wit. — köpfig, adj. and adv. addle-brained, addle-pated.

Leicht, adj. and adv. [Sax. lecht, Bohem. lehky, Sw. lätt &c., seems to be allied to the L. levis, and to lichten, lifton, lūpfen, L. le-vere, Fr. lever, Gr. λέγειν] [having little weight, not heavy] light. Eine — e Bürde, a light burden; — es Gewicht, light weight, it. false weight; ein — er Dukaten, a light ducat [not of legal weight]; — gekleidet seyn, to be lightly dressed, to have or wear light clothes; diese Dame ist etwas — gekleidet [ironically], this lady is rather transparently clad; sich — er machen, to put down a load, to put off one's clothes &c.; it. [low = seine Nothdurft verrichten] to ease one's self; — bewaffnet, light-armed, lightly armed; — e Truppen, light troops; — e Reiterei, light-horse. Fig. a) [opposed to schwerfältig, heavy, dull, slow, sluggish] light, easy. Ein — es Benehmen, easy manners; das Pferd hat einen — en Gang, liegt — in der Hand, Faust, the horse has an easy gait; eine — e Hand [in writing or calligraphy], an easy, light hand; einen — en Pinsel führen, den Pinsel — führen [in painting], to paint with easiness or lightness; eine — e, — gezeichnete Figur, an easy figure. b) [opposed to strong, heady] — er Wein, light wine. c) slight, trifling, inconsiderable. — e Wunde, a light or slight wound; — e Leiden, light sufferings. d) [opposed to oppressive] — es Blut, light, thin blood; er hat ein — es Blut, he is light, lively; — e Speise, light food; ich fühle mich — er, I find myself eased; es wird mir — er im Kopfe, my head is getting lighter, is clearing up; es ist mir — er um's Herz, my heart is much eased. e) [opposed to considerate, exact] light. Zu — über etwas weg or hingehen, to pass too lightly, superficially over any thing; etwas — weg thun, to do any thing superficially; etwas — nehmen, auf die — e Achsel nehmen [in fam. lang.], to take any thing light. f) [requiring no great labour or exertion] easy. Eine — e Aufgabe, an easy task; das ist — gesagt, it is an easy thing to say so; Cicero's Werke sind — zu verstehen, Cicero's works are easy to be understood; Sie können sich — vorstellen, you may easily imagine; das ist so — nicht, that is not so easy to be done, is not so easily done, that's not done in a trice, the matter is not so easy as you imagine; — e Schreibart, easy style; etwas — , — er machen, to make any thing easy or easier, to facilitate any thing; ich kann es nicht — thun, I cannot well do it; er ist — aufzubringen, he is easily provoked [to anger &c.], he takes fire presently; das kann außer ihm nicht — Jemand thun, he is almost the only person capable of doing that.

Leichtfertig, adj. and adv. 1) frolicksome, waggish. Der — fertige Schelm! the little rogue! 2) mischievous, malicious. Ein — fertiger Streich, a malicious trick; sie hat ein — fertiges Maul [in popular lang.], she has a malicious, slanderous tongue. 3) frivolous, light, wanton. Ein — fertiges Mädchen, a wanton girl; ein — fertiges Betragen, a light, frivolous conduct. Syn. Leichtfertig, Laise, Muthwillig, Verhuhl. Those are leichtfertig who do not consider whether their pranks are hurtful to others or not. Laise are those who somewhat outstep the proper bounds, and do things in joke or from malicious pleasure, which they, at least, do not think wrong or hurtful. We say a loser, leichtfertiger boy, and the same also of a girl. Those are muthwillig who intend some injury by their freaks. Leichtfertig is therefore a lesser fault than muthwillig, although in common parlance the latter is often used for the former, and without any bad accessory idea. Great reproach is implied when we call a female leichtfertig, since it indicates too free a conduct; this, however, may originate merely from Leichtsinn. A female is verhuhl who seeks to raise desire in men, whether merely for a passing gratification, or with a view to lure them into marriage. — fertigkei, f. 1) frolicksomeness, waggishness. 2) mischievousness, maliciousness; it. mischievous action. 3) wantonness. — flüffig, adj. easily rendered fluid, very fusible. — flüffigkei, f. quality of being easily rendered fluid. — fuß, m. Fig. [in familiar language] a thoughtless, over-gay youth; a heedless, giddy, hare-brained fellow. — füßig, adj. and adv. light-footed, nimble-footed. Fig. light, giddy. — gläube, m. V. — gläubigkeit. — gläubig, adj. and adv. credulous. — gläubigkeit, f. credulity. — hörrig, adj. having a good, a delicate ear, quick, sharp [of hearing]. — lernend, — lernig, adj. V. Gelehrig. — schiff, n. V. Richter. — sinn, m. 1) want of thought and attention, levity, frivolousness, lightness. Es liegt ein wenig — sinn in seinem Betragen, he is a little giddy-headed, hare-brained. 2) thoughtless, inconsiderate action. — sinnig, adj. and adv. thoughtless, light, frivolous, giddy-headed. Ein — sinniger Mensch, a heedless, giddy, hare-brained fellow. Syn. Leichtsinzig, Flatterhaft. Leichtsinzig indicates the inability to receive sufficiently strong impressions from objects, with respect to their causes; flatterhaft with regard to their effects. A leichtsinziger man stakes what is of most importance to him, and forgets directly the greatest losses, because, from want of attention, the most important things make no impression on him. An effect of this disposition is Flatterhaftigkeit, or the rapidity with which a man hurries from one object of his choice to another. — sinnigkeit, f. V. — sinn.

Leichte, f. 1) quality of being light or facile. V. Leichtigkeit. 2) V. Leichten II.

II. n. [-es, without a pl.] 1) unpleasant sensation, painful feeling, grief, sorrow, affliction. Freude und — mit Einem theilen, to take an equal share in the good and bad fortunes of any one; Freude und — wechselt bunt im Leben, life is chequered with pain and pleasure, joy and sorrow; über etwas — tragen, Reue und — empfinden, to repent any thing very much or intensely; Einem sein — klagen, to tell any one one's grievances, to complain of one's griefs to any one; vor [Herze] — sterben, to die with grief or sorrow, to pine one's self to death, to die of a broken heart. 2) wrong, injury, harm. Einem ein — zufügen, etwas zu — e thun, to hurt, to wrong, to injure, to harm any one, to do any one harm; was ist Ihnen — s or zu — e geschehen? what harm have you received? das hat er ihm zu — e gethan [in fam. lang.], he has done that to vex or to spite him; weber Sie — bes noch — es von Einem sprechen [in familiar lang.], to speak neither well nor ill of any one; sich selbst ein — or — es anthun [in popular lang.], to make away with one's self. 3) mourning. Das — anlegen [in popular lang.], to go into mourning; das — um Einen tragen [in popular language], to wear mourning for any one; das halbe — [in popular language], second or half mourning; it. V. Beileid. 4) funeral, V. Leichenzug. Das — führen [in popular lang.], to be the chief mourner. Syn. Leid, Reue. Leid implies unpleasant feelings in general. We feel Leid at the loss of a friend; an error we commit and repent of, causes us Leid; but the error of another which renders him unhappy also causes us Leid. We bereuen only what we ourselves have done.

Leid=bitter, m. V. Leidenbitter. — brief, m. V. Trauerbrief. — essen, n. — flor, m. V. Traueressen, Trauerflor. — frau, f. V. Klagefrau. — gesang, m. *V. Passionsblume], love in a mist. SYN. Liebe, Zärtlichkeit. Liebe is the delight we feel in a person, Zärtlichkeit its effect. It is Liebe in its impassioned intensity. We can therefore as little call God's Liebe to man, which is void of any vagueness of feeling, Zärtlichkeit, as we can the love of man to God, which should result from rational conviction. Liebe arises from the satisfaction we feel in the qualities of a person; Freundschaft can arise from services and kindness; it can be favour and gratitude, and implies the sentiment which renders one willing to do all that can promote another's happiness. Freundschaft is opposed to enmity, Liebe to hate.

Lieb-äugellei, f. ogling. —äugelmuskel, m. amatory muscle. —äugeln, v. intr. to ogle, †to cast a sheep's eye. Er —äugelte mit ihr, he cast amorous or languishing looks upon her. —haber, m., —haberinn, f. 1) [a person in love] lover. SYN. Liebhaber, Liebste, Geliebter, Buhler. Liebhaber implies a man by whom a woman is loved, Liebster a man as being the object of her choice and to her the Liebste of all men; Buhler signifies, in present usage, a man with whom a female lives on illicit terms. Both Liebhaber and Liebster have given place, in poetic language, to the nobler expression Geliebter. 2) [one who likes or is pleased with any thing] lover. Ein —haber der Künste und Wissenschaften, a lover of the arts and sciences; er ist ein —haber, großer —haber der Jagd, he is fond, very fond of hunting, shooting or coursing; er ist ein —haber vom Faustkampf, der Boxerkunst, he is a ring-fancier; er ist ein —haber von Gemälden, von Natur- und Kunstseltenheiten, he is fond of pictures, of objects of virtu. 3) [a person inclined to buy] purchaser. —, his destiny is a happy one, his was a happy lot. SYN. Loß, Schicksal, Ungefähr, Zufall. We employ Loß with reference to chance, Schicksal when we think of a higher will. When we are satisfied with our Loß, we call it an agreeable one, and when discontented, a wretched one; but the happy man blesses his Schicksal, and the miserable man curses it. Zufall implies an event whose cause we are ignorant of; Ungefähr that to which we ascribe the origin of an event. A Zufall arises from Ungefähr, and Ungefähr leads to many Zufälle. Loß is distinguished from these expressions in being a Zufall dependent on luck or misfortune, may often on a whole series. Most of the relations in life depend on our birth and other Zufälle. We call them therefore our Loß.

to idle, and the Medio-Lat. musardus = ein träger Mensch] leisure, spare time, ease; idleness. Werden Sie — haben, es zu thun? shall you have leisure to do it? Sie können dieses nach — thun, you will do that at your leisure hours, at leisure; —, viel — haben, to be at leisure, to have much leisure, to have much time upon one's hands. Syn. Muße haben, Müßig seyn, Müßig gehen. He who has no occupation, or is freed from the business he is required to perform, has Muße. In his hours of Muße, however, he can undertake any occupation for his pleasure or amusement, and then he is not müßig. This he can only be when he is quite unoccupied. He who from choice and habit is müßig, by shunning all occupation, gehet müßig, and is a Müßiggänger.

*Musselin, m. [-es, pl. -e] muslin.

Müssen, ir. v. intr. [Sw. motta, Low-Sax] möten, Bohem. musy, probably allied to mögen] 1) [denoting physical and moral necessity, to be obliged. Wir — alle sterben, we must all die; man muß essen, um zu leben, we must eat in order to live; das mußte nothwendig eine solche Wirkung haben, that must needs have, that could not but have such an effect; müssen Sie das wissen? is it necessary for you to know that? dazu muß ich Geld haben, I must have, I want money to do that; selbst wenn ich sterben müßte, even if I were to die; ich muß nach Hause [i. e. gehen], I must go home; es muß wieder herbei, it must be found again. 2) to be compelled, constrained or forced. Ich habe ihm das Geld geben —, I have been forced, constrained or compelled to give him the money; sie hat ihn heirathen —, she has been forced &c. to marry him; er muß, er mag wollen oder nicht, he must [do it], whether he will or no, [low] will he nill he; er wollte nicht, aber er mußte, hat gemußt, he would not, but he was forced or compelled [to do it]. 3) [expressing an apparent necessity, duty or purpose] Es mußte sich gerade so fügen, chance would have it so; — wir uns hier wieder finden? are we to find, must we find each other here again? mußte er gerade heute kommen? could he not have come another day? ich muß einen Brief schreiben, I have to write a letter; wir — unsere Schulden bezahlen, we ought to pay our debts; dort muß es sehr warm seyn, it must be very warm there; er kommt noch, er mußte denn [nur] krank seyn, he will come yet, unless he be ill. 4) [instead of mögen] Was muß das bedeuten? what does that signify or mean? o müßte [möchte, könnte] ich für dich sterben! o that I might die for you! so müße es dir denn gelingen! may you succeed then! welche Zeit muß es wohl seyn? what o'clock may it be? 5) [used in entreaties] Sie — aber auch kommen, but you must come, pray come, but you will come I hope; mich — Sie nicht fragen, pray do not ask me; Eines — Sie mir versprechen, you must promise me one thing; Sie — mich nicht verrathen, pray, do not betray me. Syn. Müßen, Sollen. Both are used as well with reference to physical energies as to rational and moral agents. The miller wishes that his mill sollt gehen, because he has something to grind; and if there is no derangement in the mill it muß gehen. That which we dare not leave undone we sollen thun; that which we cannot leave undone we müssen thun. We müssen thun that which we sollen thun even when we do it against our will.

Syn. Oberflächlich, Seicht The Oberfläch-liche does not penetrate to any depth; that which is seicht has no depth. He is oberflächlich, for instance, who, in the acquirement of knowledge, does not take proper pains to dive into the subject he is studying, who does not go deep into it, and consequently is unable to give any solid instruction in it to others. Seichtigkeit, however, is a defect of the understanding, and is opposed to Gründlichkeit. It is always a reproach to call the understanding seicht;
we may however call it oberflächlich without intending to imply any thing contemptible. — fläch-barten Wahrheiten der Religion, the revealed truths of religion; sich Einem —, Einem sein Herz —, to unbosom one's-self to any one, to display or open one's heart to any one. Das —, the manifesting, revealing, displaying &c. SYN. Offenbaren, Bekannt machen, Eröffnen, Anzeigen, Entdecken, Verrathen. That which is bekannt gemacht is brought to the knowledge of others; that which is angezeigt is intended for the information of one or more whom it more particularly interests or concerns. When we inform a person of any thing, in which we ourselves are interested, with a view to influence his will, we eröffnen it to him. That which is bekannt gemacht, angezeigt or eröffnet, is not necessarily any thing secret; but whatever is offenbart, entdeckt or verrathen, has been till then a secret. Entdecken can take place involuntarily, by chance, or want of caution, and is in this distinguished from offenbaren. Verrathen borders nearly on entdecken, but is distinguished from it in this, that verrathen is commonly an Entdeckung of something which in itself is bad and likely to have dangerous consequences; whereas entdecken may be the discovery of an action in itself good and allowed, as also of something, the making known of which is not injurious to the Entdeckten.

Offenbarung, f. the manifestation [of the power of Jehovah]; the revelation, revealing, disclosing, disclosure [of a secret]. SYN. Pfaffe, Pfarrer, Priester, Prediger, Geistlicher. Priester is one who officiates in any religious rite, who performs the sacrifice, and belongs to the most sacred and revered class. In the catholic portion of the Christian church this denomination has been retained, because it considers the mass as a sacrifice. The protestant church, however, has no longer any Priester, for it does not consider the sacrament as a sacrifice; they are religious teachers, deriving their name from the most usual of their duties, that of preaching (Prediger). Pfarrer, Pfarrherr, in the language of the catholic church, is a Priester, and in that of the protestant, a Prediger, who has the right to administer his office in a particular community, or parish, which is called the Pfarre, and to enjoy the income attached to it. Pfaffe is a low and contemptuous expression for Priester, V. Baalspfaffe. Geistliche are all those who belong to that class who devote themselves to the performance of religious duty, in contradistinction to the laity.

Platt, adj. and adv. [allied to flatt, fla- den, to the Lat. latus, Gr. πλατύς] flat. Das — e Land, flat, open land, flat, open country, [also, in the neighbourhood of the town] the flat country, open country [opposed to a fortress or fastness]. Etwas — drücken, machen, schlagen, to press, to make, to beat any thing flat; — werden, to grow, to get, to become flat, to flatten; — er Stein &c., a flat stone &c.; — er Spiegel, flat or plane mirror, looking-glass; — e Stickerrei, plane, flat embroidery, satin-stitch embroidery; [with painters] — e Figur, flat figure; [with hatters] die Hüte — setzen, to dress the hats; [with gardeners] die — en Bande, the plat-bands; [with fowlers] — er Herd, a flat aery; it. — es Dach, flat roof; a terrace [on the top of a house]; — e Nase, flat nose, simous or goat's nose; — es Gesicht, a flat face; — es Fahrzeug, flat vessel or barge. Fig. a) — es Deutsch, V. — deutsch. b) — er Gedanke, Ausdrück, flat, insipid thought, expression; Alles, was er sagte, war sehr —, every thing he said was very flat, very tame or poor; etwas — es sagen, to say something dull, to say something like a flat; er hat sehr — gesprochen, he spoke, he has spoken flat, dull; — er Mensch, a dull man, heavy man; [with poets] — e Figur, ignoble figure. c) [in familiar language] Er schlug es ihm — ab, he refused it him flat, he plainly, regularly refused it him; Einem die — e Wahrheit sagen, to say the plain, naked truth to any one, [fam. and rather low] to say the truth out to any one quite flat, to plump out, to come out with, the plain unvarnished truth to any one. d) [fam.] Das ist — or — erdinge unmöglich, that is quite impossible, is flatly impossible. e) [in seamen's lang.] Den Wind — vor'm Backen haben, to have the wind right a-stern, a poop-wind. Syn. flatt, flach, niedrig. The Platte has no perceptible elevation, the flache no perceptible depression. The flache hand or palm stands in opposition to the closed hand or fist, and the Oberfläche of a body is its extension in length and breadth, without thickness. We call a witticism flach, when it does not go far into things, platt, when it is poor, common or vulgar. For we conceive the beautiful, the exquisite &c., as something raised above what is common. In painting, however, platt and flach are used synonymously; they are often confounded also in common conversation. Platt and niedrig differ, in so much as platt betrays a visible want of wit and sense, niedrig a want of nobleness of sentiments. Platte flattery is undisguised and insipid; niedrige flattery discovers mean sentiments.

1. Plump! [Plumps!] [onomatopoeia] —, da lag er! bump! there he lay!

2. Plump, adj. and adv. 1) [not much used] groping, fumbling, feeling one's way. Er hat einen —en Gang, he has a careful deliberate gait, plump mode of walking [putting down the foot plump at each step]; er ist ein —er Mensch, he is a heavy, bulky man. Syn. Plump, Schwerfällig, Unbehülflich. Unbehülflich indicates awkwardness in motion, plump and schwerfällig its causes; the former implying the remote, the latter the proximate and immediate cause. The Plumpe has too great a mass and too rude a form. The galleons of the famous invincible fleet were plump engines, and on that account extremely schwerfällig, so that they were too unbehülflich to escape the skilful manoeuvring of the English ships. 2) Fig. [in contradistinction to gentle, light, fine] a) heavy, coarse, ponderous, lumbering material, bulky, plump. Sie hat einen —en Buchs, she has a coarse figure [shape]; dieses Schreinwerk ist zu —, this piece of furniture is too lumbering, too bulky; dies ist — gearbeitet, this is worked coarsely, clumsily; äußerst —e Bildhauerarbeit, sculpture rude [and coarse] to the lowest degree, in the highest degree; [with painters] —e Umrisse, heavy contours; eine —e Figur, ein —es Gewand, a heavy, clumsy figure, heavy ungraceful drapery; er hat einen —en Pinsel or Pinselstrich, he has a heavy touch, his pencil is by no means light, delicate or graceful. b) [in manners and conduct] Er ist ein —er Mensch, he is a burly, coarse person or fellow; —zufahren, Etwas —angreifen, to act roughly, coarsely in any matter or affair; —er Spaß, heavy, dull jest; it. a rude joke; —er Kunstgriff, eine —e Lüge, clumsy artifice, heavy slow contrivance, a clumsy bungling lie; er hat einen —en Fehler begangen, he has committed a bungling fault. Syn. Plump, Bäurisch, Unhöflich, Grob, Tölpisch. The Tölpel displeases by his clumsy motions, arising from awkwardness; the Bäurische displeases in his language, actions and manners from want of the perception of what is becoming; but neither can be said to offend. The Plumpe and Grobe, however, fail in the respect which is due to others; the first merely from want of delicacy of feeling, the latter also from pride and contempt. The Plumpe, Grobe and Unhöfliche violate the respect due to others; the Unhöfliche merely omits what good-breeding requires; the Grobe is really offensive both in language and actions.
